In the past week, under the guise of the MI-5 "spy revelations", British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has announced the reactivation of the Security Commission (now called the Diplock Commission after its chairman Lord Diplock).

The Diplock Commission consists of seven longtime secret service executives who report only to the Royal Household. The members of the Commission are:

- * Lord Diplock, Law Lord
- * Lord Bridge of Harwick, Lord of Appeals and a former member of the High Court
- * Lord Greenhill of Harrow, former director of the Diplomatic Service and former director of British Petroleum
- * Lord Allen of Abbeydale, former Permanent Undersecretary of the British Home Office
- * General Sir Dudley Ward, former Commissioner of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers
- * Admiral Sir Horace Law, former Commander in Chief of the Naval Home Commission
- * Sir Allen Cottrell, former Science Advisor to the Government and to the Defense Ministry, currently the Master of Jesus College, Cambridge

6. The Disinformation Factor

It should be noted that much of the detailed information coming out of public sourcing will tend to have a strong disinformation factor. It is for this reason that a broad range of leads bridging different levels of the assassination command have been identified in this preliminary memorandum. Simultaneous pursuit of all five levels of the investigation is one of the most effective insurances against severe misdirection. It is the overall environment that produces the terrorist capabilities activated on March 30 that is the proper subject of any serious investigation. The agencies cited above have the capacity to deploy thousands of Hinckleys provided that they themselves remain aloof from criminal investigation.

In addition to the areas of investigation cited above, special critical attention must be devoted to establishing the reasons behind the security breach that allowed Hinckley to enter the immediate environment of the President after his October, 1980 detention in Nashville. The rigorous pursuit of that line of investigation will most surely lead to the opening up of leads that are yet to surface and that represent crucial evidence.

Columbia Costs High?

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON - The United States' first space shuttle flight, featuring the rocketship "Columbia," was a spectacular success. It is unfortunate that it cost billions more than it should have.

We have been reporting for months that the contractor, Rockwell International, has been loose with the taxpayers' money. Some of the overspending was unforeseeable and can be excused. Unexpected costs are inevitable in a pioneer space effort.

But Rockwell has a cost-plus contract. And some Rockwell officials have had the attitude that the government will pay all the cost overruns, so why worry?

For example, the company sent two employees to Europe to review a James Bond movie and charged the trip to the taxpayers. Moving the shuttle from Lockheed's California facilities to the launch site in Florida cost the public $2.5 million, just for per diem and travel expenses. Even secretarial help was hauled across the country. One Rockwell executive, while he was in Florida, ran up expenses of $7,200 a month - not counting his salary.

These charges were petty compared to some of the contracts that were awarded. A Rockwell vice president, for instance, funneled

$1.5 million to a public relations firm to publicize the space shuttle for three months. The firm just happened to employ the vice president's son.

When the spaceship was moved across the country, many of the fragile, heat-resistant tiles fell off. Rockwell hired a crew to work around the clock to make the repairs. The workers had to replace about 80 percent of the tiles.

Some of the tiles shook loose again on take-off. The tiles were essential to the safe return of the Columbia; without them, the spaceship would burn up in the friction of the atmosphere. Fortunately, not enough tiles were lost to endanger the craft.

A Rockwell spokesman denied any wrongdoing. But our sources say a grand jury is investigating the company's alleged improprieties and some indictments are expected in a few weeks.

Assassination Update: Another confusing piece has been thrown into the puzzle of the recent assassination attempt on President Reagan. It involves a charge that security was lax during the president's recent visit to Canada.

The charge appeared in a publication called "Executive Intelligence Review." The publication is associated with Lyndon LaRouche, a political activist who was a Democratic candidate in the presidential primaries last year.

The reference to lax security in the "Executive Intelligence Review" caught the eye of White House officials. They turned it over to the Secret Service to check out.

The controversial passage charges that although the Royal Canadian Mounted Police "had received death threats to Reagan prior to his visit, they allowed demonstrators to come as close as 50 feet from the president at an open-air speech."

The report claims further that "on-the-scene security personnel acknowledged that an assassination would have been easy."

We should emphasize that no conclusions have been reached by White House officials. No accusations have been made against either LaRouche or "Executive Intelligence Review." In fact, as far as we know, none are even contemplated.

But Reagan administration officials are curious about allegations of lax security that were printed just a matter of days before an attempt was made to kill the president in downtown Washington.

"The FBI is looking for every bit of psychological evidence on Hinckley's background....Even if they find all of it, they won't be able to make sense of it."

Statement given to an interviewer by Dr. Foster W. Cline, Director, Evergreen Consultants in Human Behavior, Evergreen, Colorado

I. State of the Investigation

To the credulous, John W. Hinckley, Jr. was a lone assassin. The evidence produced by the Federal Bureau of Investigation is aimed at establishing that Hinckley acted alone, had no accomplices, and that the motive for the assassination can be found in the so-called "love letters" written allegedly by Hinckley to movie actress Jodie Foster. These letters were conveniently found in the Park Central Hotel in Washington, D.C. hours after the "hit" on President Reagan. In these letters, Hinckley threatens to "kill the President" if Jodie Foster refuses to love him. After Hinckley is arraigned in Federal Court, Hinckley is taken to Butner, North Carolina Federal Correctional Center for a "60-90 day psychiatric evaluation."

In the meantime, the Secret Service announces the arrest of another potential assassin named Michael Edward Richardson in New York City. Richardson was discovered to have written three letters to Jodie Foster threatening to "finish the job that Hinckley had failed to do"--to "kill the President." The Secret Service releases a statement that there is no connection between Hinckley and Richardson. Simultaneously, a report leaked out that the Secret Service had picked up a man at the Washington, D.C. Hilton Hotel immediately prior to the assassination attempt. The "suspect" was questioned and released on grounds that he did not constitute a threat. It was later revealed that this "suspect" may have been identified by witnesses as stalking the President at the Irish embassy only days before the shooting.

In total, nine other "suspects" or "potential assassins" have been arrested for questioning and examination since the attempted "hit." So far, according to official statements, there's not one shred of evidence linking any of the individuals picked up to Hinckley or evidence that Hinckley was brainwashed.

No conspiracy exists despite the fact that four terrorist-linked individuals were arrested by the Judicial Police of Tijuana, Mexico for planning the assassination of President Lopez Portillo of Mexico and Ronald Reagan. The assassination was to have been scheduled for late April when Lopez Portillo and Reagan had planned to meet.

On April 17, President Giscard D'Estaing of France was the target of an assassination attempt on the island of Corsica.

Several members of President Reagan's cabinet have had their lives threatened and Vice President George Bush's residence was nearly invaded by three individuals attempting to climb over the fence. Numerous security breeches have occurred at the White House and State Department by individuals tied to the pro-terrorist, Jesuit-trained Berrigan brothers. According to federal law enforcement officials, there is no evidence to suggest that any of the above incidents are remotely related.

While there is no official version of a conspiracy linking any of the events to Hinckley's attempt on the life of President Reagan, there remain the unanswered questions concerning the Hinckley case. Why has no evidence been produced concerning Hinckley's weapon training? He was obviously trained and was quite proficient in his shooting. Could this be accidental or the work of a rank amateur? Why has the FBI failed to adequately explain the November 9 mishap when they obviously failed to pass the information to the Secret Service on Hinckley's arrest for carrying three guns at Nashville Airport?

Has FBI Director William Webster given clear and informed testimony to the Congress on these questions? Has Secret Service Director H. Stuart Knight provided proper disclosure on how Hinckley managed to get into the restricted area where press credentials are always required? Why hasn't a word been printed or announced in the media on the fact that President Reagan's entire security was stripped of its weapons by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) during the President's trip to Ottawa in early March?

Overarching all of these questions is the central issue: Was Hinckley a "lone assassin" or was he a "Manchurian Candidate?"

II. Evidence of the Manchurian Candidate Profile

It has been confirmed that John W. Hinckley, Jr. was under psychiatric care in both Lubbock, Texas and Evergreen, Colorado for approximately one year leading up to his March 30 attack on the President. In Lubbock, where he attended Texas Tech, Hinckley was an on-again off-again patient under the care of Dr. Baruch Rosen. Dr. Rosen had been treating Hinckley for severe depression by providing him with two drugs: Valium, a mild depressant; and Surmontil, a drug known as a "mood manipulator" that can "trigger hallucinations." Hinckley was seeing Dr. Rosen during the summer months of 1980. No evidence has turned up to suggest that Dr. Rosen was involved in the brainwashing of Hinckley. However, it does represent the pattern of Hinckley's continual care by psychiatrists.

From January 1980 to approximately July 1980, Hinckley was under the care of Dr. John J. Hopper, of Evergreen Consultants in Human Behavior. Dr. Hopper, a former Air Force psychiatrist, is a strong advocate of electroconvulsive shock therapy (EST)--the use of high voltage electrical shocks to the brain as a means of treating chronic schizophrenics. EST was used during the Korean War and Vietnam War as a method of torture and as a tool for transforming the behavior of a prisoner of war by creating an aversive environment for psychologically controlling the targeted victim.

Dr. Hopper is a leading proponent of EST. In 1978, he was one of ten psychiatrists who prepared a special report for the Colorado Psychiatric Society defending the use of electro-shock as a perfectly clean and effective means of providing therapy.

To this date, Dr. Hopper has refused to state whether or not Hinckley had undergone EST treatment or what the nature of the treatment was. It has also been reported, albeit unconfirmed, that Hinckley was under Hopper's care at Mt. Airy Hospital, an exclusive psychiatric institution specializing in the use of EST for treatment of drug and alcohol addiction. Dr. Hopper had been trained at the University of Texas, Galveston and spent one year in Spokane, Washington during his internship at a local hospital. Between 1968-1971, Dr. Hopper had a residency at the Titus Clinic, which is attached to the University of Texas Psychology Department. The Titus Clinic was then led by Dr. Hamilton Ford, a prominent neurologist and psychiatrist specializing in chemotherapy and electro-shock.

Dr. Hopper's close associate is Dr. Edmund Casper, director of the Denver General Hospital Community Mental Health program. Casper was also a staff psychiatrist at the Mt. Airy Hospital. The programs at Mt. Airy are considered highly controversial because of the techniques they employ.

Casper was a former Army Divisional psychiatrist in Vietnam during 1967-68. During this period, special teams of U.S. military psychiatrists were sent into Vietnam to study the effects of wartime stress upon U.S. soldiers. One team of psychiatrists was led by the former Carter White House advisor on Drug Abuse, Dr. Peter Bourne. Bourne, an advocate of drug decriminalization and drug usage, was able through these studies to create special psychological group studies of American GIs in Vietnam. Many of these GIs later formed the antiwar, pro-terrorist Vietnam Veterans Against the War (VVAW). Not all the psychiatrists sent to Vietnam were engaged in the same activity as Bourne. However, Casper's outlook and methodology on dealing with psychiatric patients coheres with Bourne's outlook. Further investigation into this relationship is required.

It should be noted that Dr. Casper was employed by the U.S. Army from 1963 through 1971. In addition to his Vietnam position, Casper served as assistant chief of the forensic ward of Fitzsimons Army Medical Center, at the Fitzsimons base in Denver. Fitzsimons, one of six U.S. Army medical centers, services U.S. Army facilities not only in Colorado but many other central and Rocky Mountain states. During the period that Casper served in army psychiatry, the Department of Defense ran the Incapacitating Agents Program, testing, among other agents, LSD, Psilocybin, and other psychotropic drugs. Dr. Casper had oversight of prisoners committed to psychiatric confinement--the most commonly used in brainwashing drug experiments. Was Dr. Casper or any of his associates involved in this program?

Some investigators believe that Air Force psychiatrists associated with this program were involved in the programming of the "Son of Sam" killer David Berkowitz and his associate John Carr.

Although Casper apparently never treated Hinckley, Hopper could have consulted with him and most importantly with the director of the Evergreen Consultants in Human Behavior, Dr. Foster W. Cline. Dr. Cline, according to Baltimore Sun reporter Pat McGuire is considered a highly controversial psychiatrist. It is this Dr. Cline who stated that the FBI could never make sense of Hinckley's psychiatric history. The reason for Cline's rather self-assured statement may lead into the area of how Hinckley became a brain-washed Manchurian Candidate.

Dr. Cline does not rule out the use of LSD therapy for short-term usage. Cline differentiates between long-term effects of LSD and its possible short-term therapeutic value. He considers the long-term use as causing neurological brain damage to tissue. Cline employs a form of therapy called "rage therapy." This form of therapy is carried out for the purpose of producing a "purgative" and somewhat violent outburst of "rage" from the patient. It is usually done by physically restraining the patients to produce an explosive outburst or with psychological attack sessions either in a group or through doctor/patient interaction. The aim, according to Cline, is to get the patient to remove the psychological blocks from early childhood by getting the patient to recall the emotionally traumatic incidents and let loose with a burst of violent rage. Cline's theory is based on the notion that all serious personality defects stem from the first three years of life and become permanently locked into the individual unless released by this "rage" reaction.

Cline characterized Hinckley as a "senseless killer without remorse," and drew a close parallel to the recent assassination of British rock star John Lennon by Mark David Chapman. Cline also told investigators that the groups which most closely adhere to his method of psychological cure is the notorious Synanon and Cenikor drug and deviant rehabilitation programs. These two projects originated in California in the 1960s under Project MK-Ultra--a special psychological warfare program pushed through the Central Intelligence Agency by British Intelligence's Tavistock Institute. Both Synanon and Cenikor are involved, according to California law enforcement, in drug- and gun-running. Synanon has been investigated for a West Coast assassination attempt.

Cenikor was established in 1967 by a group of inmates of the Colorado State Penitentiary. All the inmates were members of the Synanon group. From its inception, Cenikor has had its national headquarters in Lakewood, Colorado. Lakewood is the small suburb ban town next to Evergreen and is the place where John W. Hinckley, Jr. stayed at the Golden Hour Motel before traveling to Washington, D.C. to shoot the President. It was also the area where the second potential assassin, Michael Edward Richardson, stayed. Cenikor has branches in the Dallas and Houston, Texas areas.

The founder of Cenikor and its chief operator was Luke Austin. Austin ran the Cenikor group until 1978 when he was replaced by Edward Fresquez who has been its director since. However, the most important individual in the organization has always been Dr. Steven Bloom, originally a consultant to Synanon in San Francisco. Associated with Cenikor within months of its formation, Bloom designated the attack group sessions which serve as the controlling feature of the group. It is known that Cenikor has worked in conjunction with Denver General Hospital. The constant surfacing and interfacing of this case with the Denver General Hospital makes it of interest.

The basis of Dr. Foster W. Cline's work comes, according to Cline, from a top level British intelligence psychiatrist named Dr. John Bowlby. Cline referred to a book written by Bowlby entitled Attachment, Separation and Loss as critical for "evaluating Hinckley." The book was based on profiled studies of child development conducted by the Tavistock Institute in 1948 which were continued into the 1970s. Cline reference to this book is no accident. It is through such studies that a profile for establishing who would make a potential assassin could be conducted.

Tavistock and a network of interlocking institutes and universities organized and created many cult groups. The British intelligence-run Tavistock Clinic created the programs of electro-shock therapy, chemotherapy, and other exotic forms of psychological manipulation that shaped several psychological warfare programs. One of these was called MK-ULTRA.

III. Background History

Any competent study of how "Manchurian Candidates" are created must begin with the development of the British intelligence-run special profiling and psychological warfare institution, the Tavistock Institute. Founded in the 1930s and upgraded in the post-war period, the Tavistock Institute's Dr. John Rawlings Rees, operating through the World Health Organization of the United Nations, organized a vast, highly-organized network of psychiatrists. Each psychiatrist is dedicated to implementing highly sophisticated forms of social control which have included the creation of political assassins.

The basis for creating this network is explicitly developed in Dr. Rees' book The Shaping of Psychiatry by War. Upon Nazi leader Rudolph Hess's 1940 landing in Scotland to secretly negotiate a peace with Great Britain, Rees and a team of British psychiatrists brainwash Hess and begin a massive psychological profiling of the Nazi war machine and its leadership. On the basis of their perfection of wartime psychological techniques and operational capabilities, British intelligence undertook the creation within the U.S. of a similar apparatus designed to carry out their programs.

One of their special warfare programs, MK-ULTRA, was in effect laundered through offices of the Central Intelligence Agency. This program and other special psychological warfare techniques were pushed through the CIA on the basis that drug experimentation in the use of LSD-25 could be utilized against Soviet espionage operations. Before this particular program could be implemented, experiments were carried out against unsuspecting victims, including a CIA agent who went on to commit suicide.

However, the CIA was merely a convenient vehicle for accomplishing a far more involved and intricate program. Under the guise of studying the Chinese and Korean communist brainwashing techniques, several major universities were contracted by the CIA to begin studies on these techniques. The studies were begun several years earlier at the Tavistock Institute and were "farmed" out to such prestigious colleges as McGill University, Stanford, UCLA, Harvard (where counterculture advocate Dr. Timothy Leary did his LSD experiments), M.I.T. and the University of Chicago. The World Health Organization, and later in 1954 with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, along with several leading hospitals around the nation, instituted Tavistockian or special psychiatric programs.

According to Tavistock founder Dr. Rees, the entire conception was based upon the creation of what he called a vast army of "psychiatric shocktroops" who could carry out social control programs. Practically all of the so-called "Community Mental Health Centers" are organized on Rees' outlook. A vast network of psychologists, sociologists, and anthropologists led by such figures as the now-deceased Margaret Mead and her husband Gregory Bateson organized the apparatus over the last three decades.

Evergreen psychiatrist Dr. Cline's references to Tavistock's Dr. John Bowlby indicate that he is at least influenced by, if not a direct part, of this apparatus. Dr. Bowlby, a resident psychiatrist at Tavistock since 1946, was working in the British military on similar projects. Trained at Cambridge University's Trinity College, Bowlby worked on a 1950s special project on child development with Margaret Mead, Anna Freud and Gregory Bateson along with Christoph Heincke and Ilse Westheimer. Out of their work came the creation of the Tavistock Child Development Research Unit. A three-volume work located in Tavistock's International Psychoanalytic Library and released under the title Attachment, Separation and Loss is considered by Cline as the source on the subject. Bowlby credits two colleagues as being instrumental in carrying out these childhood studies, James Robertson and Mary Salter Ainsworth. Bowlby states that the most important aspect of his work was conducted in four seminar meetings where the question of mother-infant interaction was the critical focus. The profile of mother-child relations is critical for creating Manchurian Candidates.

It is noteworthy to point out that John Hinckley's mother

bore a physical resemblance in her earlier youth to the movie actress Jodie Foster, and, according to Evergreen neighbors, Hinckley's mother went by the nickname "Jodie." Could this explain how Hinckley was brainwashed?

Returning to Bowlby, his studies and special expertise were guided by top British intelligence operative Sir Julian Huxley. Bowlby's work at Tavistock was funded by the U.S.-based Ford Foundation, the Josiah Macy Foundation, the World Health Organization, the Sir Halley Stewart Trust, and the International Children's Center in Paris. Bowlby was also a visiting professor at the Stanford University Center for the Advanced Study of Behavioral Sciences, a center which helped create the infamous group therapy program, the Esalen Institute. Esalen was an official part of the MK-ULTRA project and was involved in the brainwashing of psychotic killer Charles Manson. Esalen and Tavistock's funding also came from the Foundations Fund for Research in Psychiatry, an organization which was headed by Margaret Mead's daughter, Mary Catherine Bateson.

If the relationship among Bowlby's childhood profiles, MK-ULTRA, and Dr. Foster W. Cline appear to be unrelated to President Reagan's assassin, then let's look at the relationship between Dr. Foster W. Cline and the Christian Home for Children in Denver. Cline is the psychiatric consultant to this special home for "borderline" sociopathic children who are diagnosed as possible "clinical schizophrenics." Funded by the religious sect called the Disciples of Christ, the home utilizes Cline's method in treating these children. It was the Disciples of Christ through an official named Barton Hunter who helped Rev. Jim Jones obtain his first temple and fund his activity from the time he was in Indianapolis to his sojourn in California. Is there a relationship between Evergreen Consultants, the Christian Home, and Hinckley?

According to FOIA documents on MK-ULTRA, Alden B. Sears conducted a series of studies for the MK-ULTRA project at the University of Denver. The project was financed through the Geshickter Fund. Charles Geshickter was an U.S. Army psychiatrist working as a civilian at Walter Reed Hospital, the same hospital where Dr. Edmund Casper received a great deal of his training. Is there any relationship to be established further with Dr. Hopper and his patient John W. Hinckley, Jr.?

To further underscore how these special psychological warfare programs functioned, let's review the case of Synanon and Cenikor. It is a known fact that the so-called founder of Synanon, an unfortunate individual named Dietrich, was one of the first victims of the LSD experimentation program under MK-ULTRA. Two psychiatrists, Dr. Sidney Cohen and Dr. Keith Ditman, according to one source, brainwashed Dietrich. Both Cohen and Ditman were recipients of MK-ULTRA funds. Ditman is reported to have treated Manson family cult member Linda Kasabian and Charles Manson at the UCLA Brain Institute.

According to the same source who reported on Cohen and Ditman, Mark David Chapman was brainwashed at the Castle Memorial Hospital in Kahului Hawaii while under the care of Dr. Denis Mee-Lee. Dr. Cline's reference to Mark David Chapman in an interview as being similar to Hinckley could be critical in this regard.

Further background checks into the Hinckley family's own profile reveal a constant overlap with church-related programs dealing with drug abuse and alcoholic rehabilitation. According to preliminary investigations, the same Episcopal Church in Dallas, Texas attended by the Hinckley family before moving to Colorado created a drug abuse program called the Palmer Drug Abuse Program. The PDA operates in three cities: Houston, Dallas, and Lakewood-Evergreen, Colorado. Some of the funding for this program comes from the Cullen Oil Foundation, M.B. Anderson, and the Sid Richardson Foundation. One New York-based source has indicated that the Cullen Oil nexus provided the initial seed money to establish the Hinckley family-owned Vanderbilt Energy Corporation. Does the coincidence of funding conduits for the father's corporation and the drug abuse program bear any relationship worth investigating?

The place where Hinckley has been taken, Butner, also requires a critical examination. The Butner Correctional Center in North Carolina was originally designed as a "behavior modification" facility by Norval Morris, Professor of Criminology at the University of Chicago. Morris, a close collaborator of former Attorney General Edward Levi, advocates the type of psychiatric treatment for "socially deviant behavior" that the MK-ULTRA project employed. According to a newspaper reporter in Raleigh, N.C., Butner Federal Correctional Center was originally a "brainwashing" facility where brain surgery (lobotomies), drug therapy, and group encounter techniques were employed. The British-born Morris was a long-time collaborator of University of Chicago-based Margaret Mead. In fact, one of the leading proponents of the "lone assassin" theory is University of Chicago professor of psychology Lawrence Freedman, the director of the Institute for the Study of Behavioral Sciences. Could there be a relationship between those who advocate the "lone assassin theory" and the very institutions which have been involved in brainwashing?

IV. Conclusion

The questions posed in this special report require a commitment to go beyond simple inductive and deductive methods of investigation. The notion of perpetrator and motive becomes transformed by the criteria of investigation this report has laid out. No simple motive explanation can be utilized where "love letters" become the basis for prima facie evidence to explain why Hinckley "desired" to carry out an assassination attempt.

Perhaps by looking at the other potential assassin, Michael Edward Richardson, a deeper insight into the parallel profiles will compel the investigator beyond looking for mere "clues". Richardson is most likely another "brainwashed" assassin.

His profile begins with training at the Rev. Carl McIntyre-run Shelton Bible College in Cape Canaveral, Florida. According to both historical documents and well-placed intelligence sources, McIntyre's missionary work in conjunction with the American Council of Christian Churches was utilized as an FBI Division 5 "cover" for running assassination operations.

New Orleans District Attorney James Garrison implicated ACCC Reverends E.E. Bradley and Albert Osborne as having been complicit with Col. Clay Shaw in planning the assassination of President John F. Kennedy. According to published sources, Osborne was the director of a secret assassination unit based out of Pueblo, Mexico created in 1942 by Sir William Stephenson, Major Louis Mortimer Bloomfield and J. Edgar Hoover. This unit existed according to these sources up until at least 1969.

According to that same document, the ACCC was intimately tied to the covert capabilities of the British SOE-created intelligence networks inside the U.S. intelligence community in the same way the MK-Ultra project was conducted. The old Hoover-run FBI Division Five was connected to the British-Canadian SOE apparatus set up by Sir William Stephenson and his underling Major Louis Mortimer Bloomfield. It was through Permindex, a corporation set up as an intelligence cover, that assassination schemes were carried out against French President Charles de Gaulle and U.S. President Kennedy. Lee Harvey Oswald was no "lone assassin."

This Permindex-SOE network is working hand in glove with the Socialist International, Jesuit, and Philbyite-KGB/Cuban intelligence apparatus which planned in early December 1980 the destabilization of the newly-elected Reagan Presidency. It is in the context of this apparatus that the recent arrests by the Mexican Judicial Police in Tijuana of four terrorists who were planning the late April assassinations of Presidents Lopez Portillo of Mexico and Ronald Reagan should be investigated. The names of the four would-be assassins are:

- (1). Cynthia Green -- U.S. citizen
- (2). Miguel Anthony Martinez -- U.S. citizen
- (3). Jesus Garcia Naranjo -- Mexican citizen
- (4). Raul Garcia Naranjo -- Mexican citizen

The four were members of the newly-formed organization called the "Che Guevara Commandos."

It is possible that this world-wide assassination network described above was also responsible for the recent attempted assassination of French President Giscard D'Estaing in Corsica. The Permindex circle in France is working with Lybian dictator Qaddafi and his foreign minister Jalloud, who are financing the Corsican separatist movement.

If the Manchurian Candidate brainwashing apparatus is not officially investigated and if the present line of investigation remains focused on the so-called "lone assassin", then a continued massive escalation of terrorism and assassination is absolutely predictable.

Through U.S. law enforcement agencies and within the CIA and related circles, there is a realization that Hinckley was not a "lone assassin." From interviews with leading figures throughout the U.S., the consensus is that an all-out investigation must be launched if the President is to be kept alive and if the republic is to survive. Any wishy-washy attitude toward investigating this apparatus will lead to an automatic escalation of political violence unseen since the late 1960s and early 1970s. This is the scenario which was forecast by Investigative Leads starting in December 1980 and repeated in the Vol. 2, No. 1, January 20 issue, where the possibility of an assassination attempt against President Reagan was outlined. When President Reagan took his trip to Canada in early March and his Secret Service was stripped of its weapons, an assassination plot was rapidly unfolding. Proper channels were informed, but no action was taken. Must we wait before it is too late?

SPECIAL REPORT: WHO'S BEHIND THE ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT REAGAN

Editor's Note: This issue of Investigative Leads will temporarily utilize our old format in order to speed up the production process and achieve the earliest possible release. We are doing this because the assassination attempt on the life of President Reagan represents a serious threat to the future of our nation. Experienced law enforcement and intelligence officers evaluate that although the President survived this attempt, the threat has in no way diminished. Unless the assassination network in the United States that carried out this attempt is properly identified and rooted out, that threat remains an active probability. This issue of Investigative Leads outlines the most fruitful areas of investigation that can lead to the destruction of this apparatus.

"MANCHURIAN CANDIDATE" ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT REAGAN FAILS

Reference files: John W. Hinckley, Jr.; Federal Bureau of Investigation; British Security Commission.

In the five-day period following the assassination attempt against President Reagan in Washington, D.C., the staff of Investigative Leads conducted the first phase of an exhaustive investigation into all related aspects leading up to and including the shooting. As this special issue goes to press, the findings to date point to an assassination plot involving John Warnock Hinckley, Jr. and a number of accomplices who may or may not have been on the scene at the Hilton Hotel when the shooting occurred. Late-breaking evidence released through the U.S. press indicates that at least one other "potential assassin" was pre-screened from the March 30 crowd and that Hinckley was in contact by telephone with several individuals in the Washington, D.C. area in the hours leading up to his attempt on the President's life.

The totality of evidence released to date already establishes that Hinckley was a programmed assassin -- a "Manchurian Candidate" -- who was subjected to extensive behavior modification in preparation for his assignment. Given this profile, much of the information on his personal history and his various organizational affiliations must necessarily be evaluated from the standpoint of sorting out those critical leads from a mass of "false trail" information.

To facilitate the broadest possible investigation into the nearly tragic events of March 30 and to ensure that no "second chance" attack on the President or any other leading American figure is facilitated by an unsuccessful inquiry, the staff of Investigative Leads, in consultation with leading law enforcement and security service personnel from throughout the world, has prepared a grid of questions that must necessarily be answered in order to get to the bottom of the plot.

We present those questions here:

1. Where did John W. Hinckley, Jr. receive his weapon training? Careful review of the videotape film footage of the assassination attempt demonstrates that Hinckley was a proficient shooter, particularly skilled in the execution of rapid fire under combat stress conditions. His choice of weapon, in particular, bears all the earmarks of a singular mission: kill the President at close range.

Not one word has surfaced publicly as to Hinckley's training in combat handguns. Furthermore, the speed and concentration of fire on March 30 would have required consistant practice with the designated assassination weapon during the period leading up to the attempt on President Reagan's life. Are there any records of Hinckley turning up at shooting ranges in Washington, D.C., Evergreen, Colorado, or Hollywood, California over the last two-month period?

2. Why did the FBI fail to act on the basis of the arrest information received on Hinckley in Nashville, Tennessee during October 1980?

Hinckley was detained by Nashville Airport Police attempting to board a New York City-bound flight while carrying at least three weapons and fifty rounds of ammunition. Yet, the U.S. Attorney's office in Nashville reports that the FBI did not indicate that multiple weapons had been seized (had the U.S. Attorney been informed, Hinckley would have been detained). Despite the fact that Hinckley was flying into New York City, where both President Carter and candidate Reagan were scheduled speakers, from a city where both had been scheduled to appear -- no report was made to Secret Service or the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms division of the Treasury Department.

While this FBI failure has already been cited in Congressional testimony by Treasury Secretary Regan and Secret Service Director Knight, a thorough investigation is in order. Based on recent years' profile, it must be determined whether Hinckley was already a known entity to federal agencies at the time of his Nashville arrest.

3. Did Hinckley's psychiatric treatment at any point the following centers of brainwashing currently operating in the U.S.: behavior modification institutions involved officially or unofficially in MK-Ultra or any other drug conditioning experiment; "EST" or any other Lewinite sensitivity training; the Church of Scientology or any other cult-therapy centers employing linguistics methods of brainwashing; the Esalen Institute; the Rand Corporation; the Aspen Institute for Humanistic Studies; clinics and/or therapeutic communities run by Dr. Frederick Hacker, Dr. David G. Hubbard, Dr. Jolly West, Dr. Robert J. Lifton, Rabbi Maurice Davis or any of their proteges; any U.S. or Canadian-based institution affiliated with the London-based Tavistock Institute and its affiliated Center for the Study of Conflict? These institutions represent some of the leading witting centers of brainwashing, any one of which possesses the resources and the trained personnel able to create a "Manchurian Candidate" assassin.

At this point, the totality of evidence made available through public channels and through sources accessed by Investigative Leads overwhelmingly points to such a "Manchurian Candidate" profile of Hinckley.

A preliminary grid of suspect institutions in Colorado and Texas includes the Palmer Drug Abuse Program, the Evergreen Consultants in Human Behavior, Mount Airy Hospital, the Colorado Holistic Health Network and the Aberrant Behavior Center.

Numerous previous cases, such as that of the Symbionese Liberation Army, the Black Liberation Army and another purported "lone assassin," David Berkowitz (the so-called Son of Sam) have all been documented by IL specialists to have been subjects in professional behavior modification programs. These programs, such as the Vacaville Prison behavior modification unit, run by Dr. Frederick Hacker, employ behavior conditioning techniques first rigorously employed in the pre-World War II period at the Tavistock Clinic in London and subsequently exported en masse to the U.S. Drugs such as polyxyn and thorazene and torture techniques such as electro-shock and sensory deprivation are used on the targeted victims. The result has often been programmed killers: whether they belong to so-called political cells, to Satanic cults or even to the growing ranks of "lone assassins."

It is in this light that the question of Hinckley's membership in the National Socialist Party of America should be examined. Whether Hinckley was even a member is still an open question. If he was, it is likely that he was "sheepdipped" through the NSPA in order to create a false trail for investigators. It should be remembered that in the case of Frederick Cowan who was responsible for the beserker killings of several people in Westchester County, New York in January 1977, the primary investigatory issue was not his NSPA affiliation, but his membership in the same cult as David Berkowitz.

The past decade's proliferation of drug use among the nation's youth, the epidemic-proportion outbreak of homosexuality and the popularization of T-group and other self-brainwashing techniques among particularly the nation's middle and upper class population has created a massive recruiting ground and labor pool for "Manchurian Candidates" schools such as those listed above.

Both Playboy magazine and key affiliated sections of the motion picture industry have played pioneering roles in the fostering of this climate. Playboy's sponsorship of homosexuality, drugs and cultism has been recently documented in a special report being prepared by IL. The role of the motion picture industry has already become a matter of direct concern to the Hinckley investigation.

Script writer Paul Schaefer has confirmed that his screen play "Taxi Driver" closely conformed to the psychological profile of Arthur Bremer, the would-be assassin of George Wallace. Hinckley cited that film as one of the triggering factors in his own attempt on the life of President Reagan. While the media publicity surrounding "Taxi Driver" revelations has been principally directed at bolstering the bogus "lone assassin" claim, the same evidence points in a fruitful direction as well. Was the film employed as an audiovisual aid in the brainwashing of Hinckley? Are any officials of Columbia Pictures witting in the overall "Manchurian Candidates" infrastructure? Columbia Pictures does have close interface with both Playboy Foundation and the Huxley Institute -- two agencies that do bear immediate investigation re: institutionalized brainwashing capabilities.

This mass-scale aversive conditioning of the American people and the more targeted profiling and recruiting of Manchurian Candidate assassins poses a necessary further question: how many more John W. Hinckleys are presently roaming the streets as controlled human time bombs?

4. Has the summer meeting of the Group of Five heads of state in Canada been designated as a high-feasibility time and place for a second attempt on the life of Ronald Reagan? The Ottawa conference should be a matter of grave concern to all security officials involved in protecting President Reagan and the other attending state heads.

During President Reagan's recent trip to Canada to meet with Prime Minister Trudeau, there were a string of severe security breaches that at several times placed the President in immediate physical jeopardy. IL investigators have established that those security breaches were part of a "dry run" profiling of the Reagan security screen, and that personnel on Trudeau's executive staff and on the Privy Council's crisis management unit were witting in this effort. Affiliates of the International Law Association, connected to a forthcoming conference on international terrorism at Carlton University in Ottawa, have been identified as part of this "dry run" profiling team. Two of these individuals, Thomas Mitchell and Michael Wittington, acknowledge collaboration with two leading behavior modification specialists cited above -- Dr. David G. Hubbard and Dr. Frederick Hacker.

The special role of Canada in current and future assassination efforts against President Reagan and other political targets is underscored by the political power exerted over that "British Crown Colony" by the remnants of the World War II British Special Operations Executive (SOE) of Sir William Stephenson. The SOE network, through the person of Major Louis M. Bloomfield of Montreal, sponsored the "joint assassination bureau" of the 1958-68 period that controlled the assassination efforts against French President de Gaulle and the successful assassination of John F. Kennedy. This Canada-based SOE network, known then as "Permin-dex," is itself a subsidiary capability of a broader intelligence apparatus that includes Playboy and other components cited above.

The British Security Commission is one of the principle subjects for investigation in order to uncover the active command center through which Permindex could have been activated. This high-level and top-secret grouping -- run directly out of the Royal Household -- was activated just two weeks ago in the wake of the "spy revelations" which implicated former top officials of British MI-5 as being KGB moles. In 1962, the Commission was activated around "sex scandals" in England. Strong circumstantial evidence indicates that the Kennedy and the de Gaulle actions were among special covert operations traced to the Commission.

Presently called the Diplock Commission, the group consists of seven longtime secret service executives who report only to the Royal Household. Members of the Commission are: Lord Diplock, Law Lord; Lord Bridge of Harwick, Lord of Appeals and a former member of the High Court; Lord Greenhill of Harrow, former director of the Diplomatic Service and former director of British Petroleum; Lord Allen of Abbeydale, former Permanent Undersecretary of the British Home Office; General Sir Dudley Ward, former Commissioner of the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers; Admiral Sir Horace Law, former Commander-in-Chief of the Naval Home Commission; and Sir Allen Cottrell, former Science Advisor to the Government and to the Defense Ministry, currently Master of Jesus College at Cambridge.

Enzensburger; Transatlantik; Center for Constitutional Rights; Repression Information Project; Campaign for Political Rights; and Ramsey Clark.

Following is a preliminary dossier on the Playboy connection in order to facilitate the broadest possible investigation into the U.S.-based "assassin-creating" networks.

Playboy and Drugs

It is well-known that the editorial pages of Playboy magazine have been advocating the reform of drug laws; it is NOT generally known that Playboy was a prime force in creating the drug lobby. The following chronology documents Playboy's relationship to U.S. drug trade:

1953-60: From the beginning, Playboy published articles which romanticized the use of "recreational" drugs. One such article of 1960, entitled "Jazz and Drugs," glorified the role of cocaine, marijuana and heroin in the chic jazz/rock subculture.

1962: Playboy editor Dan Wakefield wrote a feature article praising the effects of marijuana and openly advocating its legalization.

1963: Playboy's November issue contained numerous articles glorifying the use of LSD. One such article was authored by British intelligence operative Aldous Huxley who was sent to the U.S. in 1953 to begin the MK-Ultra creation of a drug subculture in the U.S. Among Huxley's recruits in that effort were Harvard U. Dr. Timothy Leary. Leary later became closely identified with the Yippies and the Weatherunderground.

The December issue featured an interview with Lord Bertram Russell, who just began his project to create the New Left. Russell supported Huxley's position on drug usage as a meaningful political statement.

1966-67: Playboy featured a running dialogue between Leary and Hugh Hefner's in-house sexology team, Masters and Johnson.

1971: Keith Stroup was introduced to Hugh Hefner to discuss Hefner's funding of the creation of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML). Stroup was introduced to Hefner through the executive vice president of the Playboy Foundation, Robert Gutwillig, at the urgings of former Attorney General Ramsey Clark and Ralph Nader. Stroup had the backing of Clark, Nader, Marcus Raskin of IPS, Max Palevsky of Xerox Corp. and William F. Buckley. Hefner gave Stroup $25,000 in seed money for the first year of NORML. Over the next decade, Stroup was to receive over one million dollars in contributions from Hefner.

1975: Bob Gutwillig helped to start the pro-drug High Times magazine by channelling $75,000 to Tom Forcade, a member of the Yippies and a secret member of the Weatherunderground. The money was conducted via Gutwillig's executive post at the New American Library (NAL). NAL is one of the world's largest paperback publishing houses and a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Times-Mirror Corp. which, in turn, owns the Los Angeles Times, Long Island Newsday, Dallas Morning News, and shares a joint wire service with the Washington Post.

To ensure broad distribution of High Times, Paul Krassner coordinated nationwide circulation. Krassner was a founding member of the Yippies and a 15-year contributing editor to Playboy. At the time, Krassner was also the editor of Larry Flynt's Hustler magazine. Recently, Krassner gave the keynote speech at the Yippies "National Resistance Conference" held in New York City March 20-22, 1981. At that conference, signs and banners openly called for the assassination of President Reagan. Krassner's speech also contained numerous allusions to such an attempt.

1975: In its January issue, Playboy editor Richard Rhodes called for the legalization of cocaine. To support this campaign, the Playboy Foundation launched a legal research project to find the appropriate technicalities in existing drug legislation as related to cocaine use. The result was a book published in 1979 by Playboy Press, Cocaine: Legal and Technical Defenses in Cocaine Prosecutions. The book argues that cocaine is not an opium-based chemical compound and therefore all existing codes mandating cocaine prosecution on the grounds that it is an addictive narcotic are void. The book was used in two legal suits in Illinois, arguing that criminal convictions in the state should be overturned. In March 1981 a three judge appeals court panel ruled cocaine non-narcotic.

The book utilized the expertise of medical and psychiatric personnel, many of whom were drawn directly from the MK-Ultra project. One such person was Dr. Joel Fort, a San Francisco-based doctor who created a journal called Psychedelic Review -- promotion sheet for the use of psychedelic drugs and publisher of MK-Ultra non-classified findings. In 1974, Fort's Haight Ashbury-based behavior modification center, Fort Help, was investigated as a possible safehouse where Symbionese Liberation Army terrorists housed and brainwashed newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

Terrorism and Murder, Inc.

Playboy's terrorist connection is best documented through the case of Playboy Foundation executive Bob Gutwillig. Gutwillig's connection to organized crime and terrorism emerged through an IL investigation of Hans Magnus Enzensburger in February 1980 when Enzensburger came to the U.S. to interview Presidential candidate Lyndon H. LaRouche, Jr. At that time, law enforcement and security officials warned that Enzensburger's trip may have been for the purpose of profiling LaRouche and his security team in preparation for an assassination attempt. During his trip, Enzensburger was ushered around the country by Gutwillig and featured a meeting with Ramsey Clark. The following is a current dossier:

Enzensburger is a 51-year-old West German radical poet and author. His association with international terrorism is traced back to the early 1960s when he was chief editor of the New Left magazine Kursbach published by Kursbach-Rotsbuch Verlag in Berlin. This publishing house is known to BRD law enforcement authorities as the publisher of Baader-Meinhof literature. Associated with Enzensburger at Kursbach were:

Noam Chomsky: leading U.S. left-controller directly tied to the Italian Red Brigades by Italian police. He is based at MIT in Cambridge, Massachusetts and is reportedly in touch with the Iranian underground.

Peter Bruchner: Baader-Meinhof defense lawyer charged with giving refuge to fugitive Ulrike Meinhof during the early 1960s.

Stanley Aronowitz: leading U.S. defender of jailed Red Brigades controller Toni Negri and leader of the pro-terrorist Institute for Policy Studies.

Daniel Cohn-Bendit (aka Danny the Red): leader of the Paris 1968 riots and close collaborator of the late leader of German SDS, Rudi Dutschke.

Von Plottniz: member of the Gollwitzer lawyers collective which took responsibility for the defense of the Baader-Meinhof gang.

Enzensburger is presently the chief editor of Transatlantik magazine, published by the W. German publishing house, New Mag. New Mag is owned by three individuals: a Dutch citizen named Von Nouvos (aka Heinz Losecaat); a W. German named Christina Schmidt; and Playboy's Bob Gutwillig. New Mag is responsible for setting up both the W. German pornography magazine Quick and the French version of Playboy. Lui. Lui is jointly edited by Von Nouvos and his close associate Jacques Goutelle. Goutelle has been identified by Swiss and French authorities as the top leader of several assassination squads deployed through the right-wing Secret Army Organization (OAS) against French President Charles de Gaulle. These hit teams launched 26 known attempts on de Gaulle and were known to be deployed from the top by the assassination organization Permindex.

Permindex, which stands for Permanent Industrial Expositions, was a corporate front for an international Murder, Inc. based in Montreal and run by Louis Mortimor Bloomfield. New Orleans District Attorney James Garrison's investigation into the November 1963 assassination of John F. Kennedy implicated Permindex and one of its employees, Ferenc Nagy. Nagy was the former President of Hungary during the Nazi occupation and until his death a close associate of Von Nouyos.

In short, New Mag is being investigated as another corporate front for a Permindex-like Murder, Inc. organization.

A review of the grants of Gutwillig's Playboy Foundation shows its connection to international terrorism. Note that the Foundation is not required to make public the official recipients of its funding, and therefore the organization list below is most likely not all inclusive.

* Center for Constitutional Rights: CCR is the leading legal brains behind every significant left-radical terrorist group operating in the U.S. Headed by longtime Yippie member William Kunstler, CCR represents the Puerto Rican terrorist FALN, the Weatherunderground, and the Black Liberation Army. CCR attorneys Kunstler, Ramsey Clark, and Lennox Hinds are the American representatives of the International Association of Democratic Lawyers which has a longtime history of sympathy for terrorism and has been identified as strategists behind the FALN terrorists.

* Repression Information Project: The successor domestic group to the Philip Agee-founded CounterSpy, RIP has been at the center of every effort in recent years to strip local police departments of the legal right to conduct anti-terrorist and anti-drug intelligence efforts. This has been done in collusion with hard core terrorist entities like the George Jackson Brigade -- a Northwest U.S. Weatherunderground spinoff.

* Campaign to Stop Government Spying (aka Campaign for Political Rights): Another CounterSpy spinoff acting as a nationwide umbrella for pro-terrorist and anti-police activity. The "Campaign" maintains liaison to Baader-Meinhof and Red Brigades legal support networks. Leading members include the American Friends Service Committee, the Center for National Security Studies run by Morton Halperin, the American Civil Liberties Union, the Jesuit Office of Social Ministries, and the Church of Scientology (see IL Vol 1, No. 18).

CULT CONTROL OVER "SON OF SAM" REVEALED

Reference files: David Berkowitz; Hermetic Temple of the Golden Dawn; Rabbi Maurice Davis; Sam Carr; Westchester Mental Health Association; and Hudson River Counselling Service.

David Berkowitz, the "Son of Sam" mass murderer who took seven lives during a two-year killing spree in 1976-77 was NOT a lone psychotic. According to extensive evidence compiled by a Westchester County, New York reporter and subsequently analyzed by investigators for IL, Berkowitz was part of a satanic cult that had at least 20 members, many of whom have been operative in other parts of the country.

The Berkowitz revelations represent critical experimental proof that sophisticated behavior modification techniques are being widely used to create "blind terrorists" (so-called lone assassins) on a nationwide scale. With this initial report, IL begins ongoing coverage of this crucial counterintelligence profile.

On March 19, Today, the Gannett daily newspaper servicing the northern suburbs of New York City, published a front-page article by Maury Terry detailing new evidence in the "Son of Sam" case, including a series of personal letters from Berkowitz. In those letters, Berkowitz admitted he was part of a satanic cult following the teachings of Aleister Crowley and the Hermetic Temple of the Golden Dawn. Crowley was an early 20th century British satanist whose cult activities' participants included leading figures in the British Fabian Society such as H.G. Wells, Bertrand Russell, Edward Bulwer Lytton and future Soviet KGB officials H. Kim Philby, Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean.

As law enforcement officials were closing in on Berkowitz, he and other cult members created a false trail of evidence by removing all the modern furniture from his apartment and covering the walls with psychotic graffiti. These actions were designed to convince police that Berkowitz was berzerk and had acted alone.

Berkowitz was part of a cult network that engaged in ritualistic killings of dogs; moreover, the activities of Berkowitz and his associates point toward a specific profile models used by behavior modification specialists who may have played a witting role in manipulating the two-year terror spree. Suspect in this regard are the Church of Scientology and Westchester County-based cult "deprogrammer" Rabbi Maurice Davis.

Among identified members of Berkowitz's cult were members of a family living next door to Berkowitz in Yonkers, N.Y. at the time of his arrest. The family included Sam Carr and his two sons, John and Michael. John was an Air Forceman stationed in the Dakotas up until his death (ruled a suicide) shortly after Berkowitz's arrest. Berkowitz named John Carr as a murder accomplice in his letters to Terry. Michael Carr, who reportedly died in an automobile accident in New York City shortly after John's death, was listed as an executive of the Church of Scientology and reportedly ran cult "sessions" at the Carr residence. Carr's wallet contained several names of top Scientology officials based in Sussex, England, as well as two credit cards in the names of non-existent Russians.

The Church of Scientology should be a high-priority target of investigation regarding both "blind terrorist" and espionage activities. In California, the Church has been closely linked to the Esalen Institute, a drug-behavior modification center linked to the 1950s MK-Ultra experiments with the mind-altering effects of LSD and other psychotropic drugs. Mass murderer Charles Manson spent one week at Esalen before his spree.

Another critical series of leads emerge from further review of the Carr profile. During the "Son of Sam" killings, Carr ran a telephone "hot line" answering service for a Westchester County mental health service called Hudson River Counselling Service. HRCS is a satellite center of the Norman Vincent Peal Institute for Religion and Psychotherapy on West 29th Street in New York City.

HRCS in turn was the principal "pastoral counselling" service employed by the Westchester Mental Health Association. That Association houses the offices of Rabbi Maurice Davis, an affiliate of the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) who lists himself as a specialist in the behavior modification "deprogramming" of cult members. Such deprogramming employs the identical methods of mind-stripping that are employed by such cults as the Hare Krishna, the Unification Church, etc.

The Davis intersection with the activities of Sam Carr may prove to be a critical lead for law enforcement agencies pursuing the Son of Sam case. In the late 1950s, Davis was the religious counselor in residence at the federal hospital in Lexington, Kentucky -- a site of MK-Ultra experimentation and an institution that David Berkowitz was placed in toward the end of his tour of military service.

During the early 1960s, while a rabbi in Indianapolis, Davis was the principle sponsor of another future satanic cult leader, Rev. Jim Jones. The first headquarters of the Jones Peoples Temple was in a synagogue that Davis turned over to the future mass murderer. Through Davis' urging, Jones was given a position on the city's civil rights task force.

While David Berkowitz refused in his letters to Terry to provide the names of any of his other cult accomplices, he did state that other cult members have "vanished, scattered all over the U.S.A." (Berkowitz refused to name other cult members, aside from John Carr, after he was assaulted in prison, his throat slashed.) Already, telltale signs of the surfacing of the Son of Sam cult -- ritualistic killings of dogs -- have been reported in Fitchburg, Mass., Middletown, N.J., Brookfield, Conn. and Yonkers, N.Y.

REAGAN'S SECURITY PROFILED DURING CANADA VISIT

Reference files: RCMP; El Salvador Committee; Pollution Probe; En Lutte; Thomas Mitchell; Michael Kelly; Paul Lin; Charles Gagnon; Michael Whittington; and Elliot Tepper.

It has now been confirmed that President Reagan's security was disarmed by Canadian authorities during his March 14 diplomatic visit to Canada. Despite official acknowledgement of several death threats announced by Canadian Solicitor General Kaplan, Secret Service was not permitted to carry their weapons. A professional "profiling" of Reagan's security by a group of Carleton University professors who are linked to leftist elements in Canada and are consultants to the RCMP knew in detail the President's precarious situation. It is believed that the acceptance of these highly-reckless actions significantly softened up Secret Service procedures and allowed them to be profiled by terrorist elements and their controllers.

Sequence of Events

On Friday March 9th, just 4 days prior to President Reagan's arrival, Progressive Conservative Party MP Alan Lawrence asked a highly-publicized question to Canada's Solicitor General Kaplan on presidential security. In that question, Lawrence loudly complained that Reagan's projected security was "excessive" and would result in keeping crowds away from the President.

In partial response to Lawrence's complaint, Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) inspectors Lloyd Larose and Raymond Cyr held press interviews with the Canadian Press Agency and Associated Press respectively. Both Larose who oversaw security for the Presidential tour, and Cyr, the RCMP press liaison, reported in their own widely publicized interview that the Secret Service would have their arms removed at the border and that all armed security measures would be exclusively the responsibility of the RCMP. Furthermore, the RCMP spokesmen noted that while the President addressed the Parliament on Wednesday afternoon, the RCMP would also disarm itself as is British custom, thereby rendering public the fact that the President would receive no armed protection at that time.

During the day and a half that President Reagan was in Ottawa, over two thousand demonstrators gathered to protest the visit. The demonstrators were made up of three overlapping groups.

* The El Salvador Committee: nominally run by FDR representatives Margarita Sanborne and Mario Nerin. Constituent members of the U.S. affiliate, the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador includes the Community Workers Party, the Yippies, the National Anti-Klan Network, and the American Indian Movement, many of whom have made public threats against the President.

* A Maoist contingent: Included En Lutte headed by Charles Gagnon who previously headed the terrorist FLQ along with Paul Lin. Lin has been connected to the Black September operation. Other groups include the East Asian Defense League of Toronto, the Canadian Communist Party-Marxist-Leninist, and the Parti Ouvriere Communiste of Montreale, and the Iranian Student Association.

* Environmentalists: Primarily under the control of Pollution Probe, the Canadian government-funded environmentalist group.

Even though elements of the crowd were identified as terrorists, the RCMP set barricades within fifty feet of the President for Wednesday's open-air speech on Parliament Hill. Although reports that some demonstrators got closer than fifty feet are not confirmed, professional security on the scene have stated that a potential assassination under these chaotic conditions would have been easy. Even demonstrators admitted to the unusual behavior of the RCMP -- spokesmen for En Lutte described the RCMP as "helpful" and "unusually cooperative."

The Profilers

During Reagan's visit, members of the private staff of Prime Minister Trudeau, the Prime Minister's Crisis Management Staff and the Privy Council constituted a team assigned to profile the performance of the President's security. When interviewed, members of this group characterized their profiling as a "dry run" in "the way we set up the cattle barriers, the way the crowd was set up, and how close they were able to get to Reagan."

Among the members of this team is a group of self-styled terrorist experts based out of the Political Science Department of Carleton University in Ottawa. These include:

- * Thomas Mitchell and Michael Kelly: consultants and instructors of the RCMP on techniques in combatting terrorism. Mitchell openly acknowledged his support for the demonstrating environmentalists.
- * Michael Whittington: crisis management expert of the Canadian government.
- * Elliot Tepper: past executive secretary of the Canadian Asian Studies Association; Associate of Paul Lin and Charles Gagnon whose organization En Lutte posed one of the major security threats to President Reagan.

This group is now preparing a conference entitled "Terrorism in the 1980s: The Shape of Things to Come" on April 10, 1981, whose attendance will be composed of the RCMP, Defense Department and other sections of the government. Mitchell has acknowledged that his collaborators include Frederich Hacker and David Hubbard.

Whittington, Mitchell and other members of the group are involved in the security planning for the July heads of state summit meeting in Ottawa.

FLASH: NEW SUSPECT APPREHENDED FOR DEATH THREATS TO REAGAN

As IL goes to press, April 7, 1981, it has just been reported that a male caucasian named Edward M. Richardson was arrested by U.S. Secret Service agents at 1:00 p.m. in New York City in connection with the Hinckley case. Richardson (dob 9-29-58) was arrested boarding a PATH train bound for Philadelphia and carrying on his possession a loaded .32 calibre handgun and at least three "extra" rounds of ammunition. The Secret Service was alerted to Richardson by Park Sheraton Hotel in New Haven where employees found in a room where Richardson had been staying pictures of the President with an "X" marked over his face and threatening letters to actress Jodie Foster and President Reagan. The Park Sheraton Hotel was the hotel used by Hinckley when he visited New Haven. Richardson is reportedly a resident of Drexel Hill, Pennsylvania and has been known to have traveled to Colorado.

No further information is available at this time -- 6:00 p.m.

April 2, 1981 1800 hr.

CURRENT LEVELS OF INVESTIGATION RE: THE REAGAN ASSASSINATION ATTEMPT

Investigative Leads counterintelligence staff has begun a broad-ranging investigation into the background of alleged would-be assassin John Warnock Hinckley. At this moment we are proceeding from the standpoint that the "lone assassin" theory and the "love motive" are limiting points of the official government investigation. Our responsibility is to provide the maximum areas of investigatory work which takes the so-called "love relationship" fantasy between Hinckley and movie actress Jodie Foster as just one element of the overall picture.

1. Further Background of John W. Hinckley Jr.

John W. Hinckley is presently undergoing psychiatric examination at the Marine base at Quantico, Va. From sources familiar with the Hinckley family, John W. Hinckley has been under psychiatric care over the last five months. As of yet, there is no conclusive evidence that this was the only point of psychiatric care or whether the subject was ever hospitalized for psychological problems. The public profile of Hinckley is contradictory and should not be taken at face value. What investigators must look for is the "Manchurian Candidate" brainwash profile and that he might have been programmed for the "hit". Hypnosis in combination with certain controlled substances are included points for further investigations. According to secondary intelligence community sources, Hinckley during his March 8-23, 1981 stay at the Golden Hour Motel in Lakewood, Colorado had a regular routine getting up at 9:00 AM and going to bed at 9:00 PM. At regular intervals Hinckley would receive a telephone call ordering him to a pre-designated phone booth where his apparent controller would issue coded instructions. The motel manager, Ginger Ancourt, confirmed the regular schedule of movement and when Hinckley was questioned by her as to his activity, he would only state that he was "going to work." The Royal Grand Jury Appropriations Committee that the FBI did not inform Search Sector of the fact. The reports that Hinckley projected an emotionally-disturbed appearance during his years at Texas Tech. University in Lubbock, Texas is misleading. According to his acknowledged history professor Otto Nelson, Hinckley took a course in the summer of 1978 and received an A- for his paper on Hitler's Mein Kampf. Nelson described Hinckley as a loner, but certainly not an individual with apparent deep emotional problems. It was also at this time that Hinckley was a "member in good standing" with the National Socialist Party of America based in Chicago. His recruitment and subsequent activity with the Nazis was short-lived, indicating to our investigators that the Nazi period of Hinckley can be considered significant only insofar as it serves as a "cover" for his further activity.

Hinckley's period of university schooling from 1973-80 is one of constant shifting of major course study and constant dropping out and later returning. This kind of profile clearly indicates some level of drug usage -- probably marijuana and LSD. According to students at Texas Tech, there is a group at the university which openly advocates decriminalization of drugs. The group also advocates LSD, and although they claim no knowledge of Hinckley, the group's profile clearly points to possible association with them. The group is called Concerned and Political Students and apparently frequents a countercultural saloon called Main Street, run by a person named John Paul Jones. It should be recalled that Hinckley travelled in similar circles in Evergreen, Colorado, frequently going to a Punk Rock bar called Hi-Spot 44 where a Punk Rock group called the Kamikazi Klones performed. The drug-rock group is rabidly environmentalist.

Further area for investigation is the region surrounding Lubbock, Texas. From 1976-78, there were reports of cult murders. The area where these incidents occurred was in Slaten, Texas. All of these cult ritual murders are presently unsolved. These cult murders involved the castration, mutilation and removal of the hearts of bull as part of the ritual. Farmers in this area surrounding Lubbock identified a "devil worshipping witch cult" in Dimmitt, Texas, nearly 60 miles from Lubbock as a possible clue in the cult murders. The Church of Wicca, run by Louise and Loi Stone, was involved in a murder for which Loi was acquitted. This Church of Wicca has branches in North Carolina and Pennsylvania. It should be noted that Hinckley has used the pseudonym "John Warlock."

The critical period of Hinckley's activity in terms of his stalking of President Reagan is the October to March period. During the first week of October, the 1st and 2nd of that month, Hinckley travelled to Yale University in New Haven, Connecticut where he attempted to visit Jodie Foster, the movie actress from the film "Taxi Driver." According to two bartenders in the university vicinity, Hinckley came to these bars bragging about his relationship with Foster. After several attempts to see her, Hinckley travelled to New York. From New York, Hinckley travelled to Nashville, Tenn. where he was picked up by airport authorities and arrested on his way back to New York where presidential candidates Reagan and Carter were speaking at the Alfred Smith Dinner at the Waldorf Astoria. The U.S. Attorney General in Nashville and the local police informed the FBI of Hinckley's arrest. Treasury Secretary Donald Regan told the House Appropriations Committee that the FBI did not inform Secret Service of the arrest on the 9th of October. According to Regan, the Levi guidelines preventing law enforcement from properly coordinating intelligence gathering must share in the blame for the error. After his arrest and failure to appear in court for carrying 3 guns, a .38 revolver and two .22 calibre pistols, Nashville Police issued a bench warrant for his arrest. Immediately upon leaving Nashville, Hinckley travelled to Dallas, Texas where, at Rocky's Pawn Shop, he bought the same three calibre weapons. Rocky's Pawn Shop is a notorious gun distribution center owned by Isaac "Rocky" Goldstein. The place on Elm St. is not too far from where Lee Harvey Oswald took part in the Kennedy assassination. There is a remote chance that Isaac "Rocky" Goldstein was associated with Oswald's murderer, Jack Ruby. According to well-informed New Jersey sources, Rocky's operation provided dozens of weapons for Chinatown gangs in New York City. From Dallas, Hinckley travelled back to Denver and later to Evergreen, Colorado.

2. The Jodie Foster Connection

FBI investigators have stated that the motive for Hinckley's assassination attempt was his rejection by Foster. The evidence cited to prove the case is a series of letters found in the Park Central Hotel where Hinckley stayed in Washington, D.C. The hotel, located at 18th and G St. NW, is also the hotel where Secret Service agents from out-of-town stay. In November 1980, the FBI visited Jodie Foster to question her about a kidnapping threat against her. According to Foster, she was receiving threatening letters without a signature. On March 6th, Foster turned over another letter to her college dean concerning Hinckley's wish to meet her. It appears that Hinckley was in New Haven again, this time on March 1st and 2nd. Hinckley's "brainwashed" obsession with Miss Foster possibly stems from his California period. Apparently, Hinckley stayed in Hollywood, California in a seedy, drug-infested and homosexual subculture area of Hollywood. The time period was 1976 -- the same year that the film "Taxi Driver" was made. In that film, Foster plays a prostitute friend of a taxi driver, portrayed by Robert DeNiro, who in order to gain her love threatens to kill a U.S. Senator who is running for president. It is a known fact that among brainwash controllers, Hollywood movies are used to brainwash these "zombie"-like killers to reinforce the victim's new identity. Whether there is a direct connection in this regard remains a critical point of investigation.

It is especially noteworthy to point out that the film was produced with the backing of Columbia Pictures -- a company which has extensive ties into the Playboy Enterprises-supported drug and psychological warfare capabilities aimed at specific targeted sections of the population out of which people like Hinckley are recruited.

Another critical area of corollary importance is the film "The Kidnapping of the President." This film was practically a dress rehearsal scenario for the trip that President Reagan took to Ottawa, where his Secret Service protection was totally stripped of its weapons. The setting of the film was in Canada as well. It should be noted that although Secret Service has not officially acknowledged the stripping of the President's security, our investigation into the Canadian side of that affair conclusively confirmed this fact. According to a professor at Carleton University, Thomas Mitchell, he, along with Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), conducted a thorough profile of President Reagan and his security. In coordination with Prime Minister Trudeau's own cabinet officials, Mitchell and a Michael Wittington, both of whom train the RCMP in "counter-terror," concluded that Reagan's trip to Canada constituted a "dry run" against President Reagan. Mitchell is a U.S. citizen who has lived in Canada since 1972. He graduated from the University of Maine. Mitchell has correspondence with terrorist profilers David Hubbard and H.H.A. Cooper. Both were identified in the first special report.

3. Family Background

John W. Hinckley, Sr. lived in Ardmore, Oklahoma until 1955. He moved to Dallas, Texas and worked for two small oil companies until 1970 when he founded the Vanderbilt Energy Corporation. According to public information, Vanderbilt Energy Corporation got off the ground through the investment of six individuals who put up $120,000. According to sources in New York City familiar with Texas oil circuits, Cullen Oil -- one of the largest privately-held firms -- provided Hinckley with a $800,000 loan/investment. Cullen Oil Corp. is tied into the DiPortanova family -- the Italian Genoese oligarchic family which owns considerable land in Alcapulco, Mexico and is involved in international jet-set circles. Baron di Portanova's wife Sandra is the heir to the Cullen Oil interests. Their attorney and close confidante is Roy M. Cohn, the notorious New York City lawyer who was implicated in the Kennedy assassination through his direct association with Perminex -- the front company set up by British SOE operative and terrorist controller, Major Louis M. Bloomfield. Bloomfield is also a top official of the International Law Association which is holding a conference in Sicily on "Terrorism and the Mass Media." French security identified Perminex as the assassination unit which attempted to kill General de Gaulle. Whether the Cullen Oil interests and Vanderbilt Energy Corporation have the financial and political relationship identified above remains an open question.

In addition, Hinckley is a "born again Christian" who funds one of the largest religious relief agencies, called World Vision International. Hinckley's association with World Vision began 5 years ago. WVI is a non-denominational group operating in 91 countries participating in leadership training and agricultural development programs. It is part of the Holistic Ministries that engage in missionary work around the world dealing with child care, orphanages, and hospitals. It has hospitals in Kampuchea, El Salvador, and Honduras. The present director is Dr. Stanley Mooneyham.

According to two highly-informed intelligence sources in the U.S., WVI has been involved in intelligence operations. The exact nature of this activity is at present unclear. However, it began in Korea in 1950, under the direction of Dr. Robert Pierce, an evangelical Christian missionary formerly associated with the Youth for Christ movement.

Hinckley's involvement with WVI is rather extensive. According to Robert Ainsworth, the head of the U.S. Ministries Division of WVI, Hinckley along with Ainsworth travelled to the Sahel region of Africa and Zimbabwe. Ainsworth was a battalion commander in the U.S. Army stationed at Ft. Carson until 1975. He was also a political-military affairs specialist for the State Department. His specialty was developing nations. Ainsworth also headed the Inter-Agency Task-Force for Establishing a Chemical-Biological Warfare Treaty in 1977. Prominent members of the WVI include Rev. Richard Halverson, the chaplain of the U.S. Senate; Sen. Mark Hatfield (R-Oregon); and movie actress Carol Lawrence.

Another important lead on the WVI is a prominent advertisement in the West German publication Der Speigel, March 30, 1981 edition. The ad uses a quote from pro-terrorist controller and founding member of the Institute for Policy Studies, Richard Barnet, as a means for identifying the "world food crisis." Barnet is presently in West Germany planning environmentalist attacks against NATO nuclear stockpile sites throughout West Germany. Barnet is coordinating his activity with terrorist supporter Phillip Agee and the environmentalist movement attempting to overthrow the government of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt.

WVI has its office in West Germany in a town outside of Frankfurt called Oberuvsel. Oberuvsel was an intelligence center after WWII for the Allied Command. It is also one of the centers of the Gnostic pagan movement, the Anthroposophists, where they have a farm in Oberuvsel. The Anthroposophists were a cult-offshoot of Madame Blavatsky's Theosophy Movement. The Anthroposophists were founded in Germany by Rudolf Steiner, who was instrumental in creating the environmentalist movement in Weimar Germany during the 1920s, out of which came the Hitler Youth Movement.

According to sources in the environmentalist groups operating throughout the United States, the WVI is a clear model of funding with the Hockley family. In addition, the Hockley family has been involved in the political activities of the WVI. The WVI has been instrumental in securing that Bill Richardson, a self-proclaimed prophet or spiritual teacher, has been able to circumvent legal problems. The prophet, previously identified by name, has reportedly not been able to obtain any kind of legal protection. However, he has been granted a safe harbor in the "Waldschule" located in Berlin, Germany. He has reportedly had been programmed for the "hit". Proprietary corporations and certain controlled substances are included points for the future assassination. According to sources, the Hockley family will be involved in the preparation of the hit, including the purchase of a .45 caliber pistol, Colorado has a copy of which costing up to $100. An informant has stated that Hockley has been seen carrying a handgun while ordering it to be a pre-designated place by the WVI. The supposed controlled would issue coded instructions. The prophet, according to the informant, confided the regular schedule of several, and what he did, was questioned by her as to his activity. He would only state that he was "going to work."

The legend that Hockley projected an emotionally-disturbed appearance during his years at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas is misleading. According to his acknowledged history professor Otto Nelson, Hockley was a course in the spring of 1973 and received an A+ for his project on Franklin Myles Sapp. Nelson described Hockley as a loner, but definitely not an individual with apparent deep emotional problems. It

CURRENT LEVELS OF INVESTIGATION RE. THE REAGAN ASSASSINATION TRY

On the basis of the first 24 hours of investigation following yesterday's assassination attempt against President Ronald Reagan, the IL counterintelligence staff has developed the following grid of investigative leads. These leads represent five different levels of command, all of which would have potentially been involved in aspects of the assassination effort. This initial memorandum will be updated as appropriate new elements of the investigation are developed.

1. John Warnock Hinckley Jr.

John W. Hinckley Jr., presently in FBI custody for the attempted assassination of President Reagan, bears the initial profile of a "Manchurian Candidate" assassin. Based on his proficiency with the .22 revolver he used at the Washington Hilton scene, his technical abilities are those of an expert gunman. However, no professional "hit man" would have ever attempted to carry out a Presidential assassination under the circumstances of March 30. Any avenue of escape was virtually out of the question.

The information presently available re. Hinckley's personal profile points in this overall direction. Sources close to the Hinckley family stated publicly that John Jr. was undergoing as yet unspecified psychiatric care. It is known that from March 8-23, 1981, he was living in Lakewood, Colorado at the Golden Hour Motel. He had no visitors at the motel and paid for all of his expenses in cash. He drove into Lakewood in a Plymouth Volare bearing Texas license plates. It has been reported that he was either a patient or an employee at the Mt. Airy Hospital in Denver. Mt. Airy Hospital is a very exclusive, private 100 bed hospital which specializes in psychiatric care including drug and alcohol addiction treatment. Spokesman for the hospital have refused to either confirm or deny Hinckle's presence there.

From 1978-80, Hinckley was an on-again-off-again student at Texas Tech University in Lubbock, Texas. It is known that during 1978, he was a student in the History Department, during which time he studied under Professor Otto M. Nelson.

ENCLOSURE 30

As the term paper for Nelson's course on "Modern European Social Movements: Socialism, Communism, Anarchism and Fascism", Hinckley prepared a study of Adolph Hitler's Mein Kampf. At this time, Hinckley was a member of the National Socialist Party of America (NSPA), a neo-Nazi organization. On March 12, 1978, Hinckley was in St. Louis, Mo. for meetings with members of the NSPA. According to Michael Allen, a leader of the NSPA, Hinckley was expelled from the Party some time in 1979 as the result of his continued demands that the group should "blow up and shoot up everything."

Hinckley's studies at the Lubbock, Texas campus continued through at least the summer session, 1980. In the first and second weeks of October, 1980, Hinckley was actively stalking Ronald Reagan and/or Jimmy Carter. On October 9, Hinckley was arrested by airport police at Nashville Airport as he attempted to board a flight for New York City carrying a duffle bag with several hand guns and ammunition. President Carter was scheduled to hold a town meeting in Nashville that night; and candidate Reagan was due to be in Nashville the previous day until his plans were interrupted. Both Reagan and Carter were scheduled to be in New York City beginning on October 10 to attend an Alfred E. Smith testimonial dinner.

By all standard procedures, Hinckley's name should have been added to a computerized list of individuals posing a threat to the President as the result of his detention in Nashville. For reasons that have yet to be clarified, Hinckley was allowed to leave Nashville after paying a $62 fine and his name was apparently never added to the list. That list is principally maintained by the Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division of the U.S. Department of the Treasury and is accessed by the Secret Service, the Federal Aviation Administration, the U.S. Sky Marshalls, the FBI and other agencies.

Within approximately one week of his detention in Nashville, Hinckley was in Dallas, Texas purchasing two .22 caliber revolvers.

In addition to his profiled neo-Nazi affiliations, Hinckley has been characterized as a radical environmentalist who was reportedly incensed at the anticipated anti-environmentalist policies of the Reagan administration. It has been suggested that during a period of residence in Hollywood, Cal. Hinckley was directly involved in environmentalist activities; however, no confirming evidence of this has emerged yet. It is known that Hinckley -- during his recent visits to the Lakewood, Col. area -- had been associated with the local drug-rock-environmentalist circles through a rock band called "Kamikazi Klones", led by one Jimmy Murphy.

2. The Neo-Nazi Connection

Hinckley's several year association with the National Socialist Party of America represents one level of fruitful potential leads. NSPA is associated with both the Skokie, Illinois riot provocations of the 1978 period and with the more recent November, 1979 Greensboro, North Carolina gun battle with members of the Communist Workers Party (CWP) in which five communists were killed. Among the leading identified members of the NSPA are:

* Frank Collin, leader of the Skokie march efforts, now in jail on charges of child molesting and related sex crimes. Collin is widely reported to be the son of Jewish concentration camp victims and a potential informant for the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai Brith, a private intelligence agency.

* Harold Covington, leader of the NSPA in the Carolinas and the principle figure behind the November, 1979 shootout.

* Karl Hand, leader of the NSPA in the Buffalo, New York area. Hand is closely associated with neo-Nazi circles in Canada, including Don Andrews of the Western Guard Party, now called the Canadian Nationalist Party. These networks were involved in the 1973-74 project known as "Unity Now", an amalgam of both leftwing and rightwing extremist groups who constituted themselves as a phony Canada-based cell of the Arab terrorist "Black September" group and were prepared to conduct a wide scale terrorist activation until U.S. intelligence agencies intervened to preempt the actions.

* Vincent Allen, an NSPA member in Chicago with links to a nationwide network of Nazi motorcycle gangs. These gangs go under the name National Socialist Liberation Front in several areas around the country, including Los Angeles. They are known to be the most violent of all of the neo-Nazi gangs, openly advocating the overthrow of the U.S. government through the barrel of a gun. In the southern New Jersey-eastern Pennsylvania area, there are active National Socialist Liberation Front cells. Among the identified members are: Ed Reynolds, Frank Duffy and William Sickles. Sickles operates throughout the northeast, particularly in Connecticut, in conjunction with a network of hardcore Nazi criminals with long records of prison behavior modification treatment.

It should be noted that the area of Colorado that includes Lakewood, Evergreen and Denver is heavily populated by neo-Nazi and related extremist paramilitary groupings. This profile of the area dates back to the 1950s and 1960s when organizations such as the Christian Soldiers of the Cross (a westcoast parallel to the Minutemen organization of Robert DePugh) were running active training camps in the Evergreen area.

Furthermore, the Lubbock, Texas area is long associated with rightwing extremist paramilitary causes. These connections, in turn, track into higher levels of the command apparatus through the 1960s assassination bureau, Perminex, which maintained safehouse and training facilities on large private ranches in the area.

3. Behavior Modification

The existence of "National Socialist" countergangs in the United States is properly viewed as a "political cult" capability consciously fostered through the use of behavior modification techniques frequently within prison and drug detoxification settings.

It is in this context that the role of the NSPA in shaping the profile of would-be Presidential assassin Hinckley is properly investigated. During his recent stay in the Denver area, as well as during his immediate post-Hilton interrogation, Hinckley was reportedly in a "spaced out, dazed state -- as if he did not know what had happened". His involvement with the NSPA must be viewed in the context of his reported severe mental problems and possible involvement in psychiatric behavior modification treatment.

It should be noted that the Evergreen-Lakewood, Colorado area is dotted with radical psychiatric programs -- some of which take the form of therapy communes. In a recently published book, The Aquarian Conspiracy, by Marilyn Ferguson, a series of radical psychotherapy programs were cited in the Evergreen area that engage in precisely the kinds of radical psychotherapy that leads to the fostering of political cults of both the extreme rightwing and leftwing profile. Hinckley's reported neo-Nazi and environmentalist background conforms to these kinds of programs.

Among the most immediately identified leads for investigation re. Hinckley are:

- * Dr. George Dovenmuehle, formerly the director of the Evergreen Institute and now a private psychotherapist in the Lakewood area. Dovenmuehle was reportedly involved in the founding of a Gestalt Institute in the Denver area, an Institute associated with the Colorado Holistic Health Network, located also in Denver.
- * Neuropa, a Boulder, Colorado center advertising training in philosophy, music and martial arts. Both the Evergreen Institute and Neuropa have been preliminarily identified as behavior modification programs formerly linked with the MK-Ultra experimentation in the inducement of psychosis through the use of mind altering drugs.
- * Mt. Airy Hospital (see above)

It should be noted that the Essalin Institute in southern California, a similar radical psychotherapy center, was the last known address of Charles Manson during the several week period leading up to the mass murder spree of the Manson Family. The Nazi cultist aspects of the Manson Family directly intersected the activities of the National Socialist Liberation Front and related motorcycle gang elements in California.

4. The Profilers

Proceeding from the view that a broader conspiratorial network was behind the March 30 assassination attempt against President Reagan, and that the assassination plan had the character of a "Manchurian Candidate" deployment, a further level of command is suggested. This level of command involves the profiling of both the potential assassin and the potential target of assassination.

A tightly knit network of professional behavior modification experts and criminologists has been identified that bears special investigative attention in this regard. Members of this network represent themselves as some of the world's foremost experts on international terrorism.

Among the individuals most relevant to the Hinckley case are:

- * Dr. David G. Hubbard, director of the Aberrant Behavior Center in Dallas, Texas, and former psychiatric consultant at the Medical Center for Federal Prisoners in Springfield, Missouri. The Springfield facility is known to be a center for behavior modification and is believed to have been the location where Minuteman head Robert DePugh was subjected to psychiatric conditioning. Hubbard is listed as a consulting psychiatrist for the International Law Association, an international network of lawyers involved in the higher levels of deployment control over terrorist networks.

- * H.H.A. Cooper, a British subject residing in the United States for the past several years. Cooper has personally acknowledged close ties to Italian Red Brigades controller, professor Tony Negri. Despite this, Cooper has served as a terrorism advisor to the International Association of Chiefs of Police and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. A close collaborator of David Hubbard, is presently believed to be in attendance at an international terrorism conference in Syracuse, Sicily.

- * Major Louis Mortimer Bloomfield, a leading figure within the above-cited ILA. During the 1960s, the former Special Operations Executive major was exposed by U.S. and French security services as the director of Perminex, a Montreal-based international trade company that bankrolled the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and the over thirty aborted attempts on the life of French President Charles DeGaulle. Bloomfield is a special anti-terrorism consultant for the United Nations and has in that capacity drafted every UNO convention on terrorism and air piracy.

- * Vittorfranco Pisano, the director of the European Law Division of the Library of Congress and another self-described expert on international terrorism actively predicted an early assassination of President Reagan.

Pisano is currently in attendance at the Syracuse, Sicily terrorism conference.

The particular group of behavior modification and criminology specialists cited above are an inner core within a larger environment of witting operatives who profile for future terrorist acts. They have been singled out because their immediate activities potentially intersect the particulars of the Hinckley case.

The most significant point of intersection (aside of the case of Dr. David Hubbard, whose Center in Dallas may have direct bearing on the Hinckley profile) involves the early March, 1980 state visit by President Reagan to Ottawa, Canada. During that visit, President Reagan was subjected to a severe security threat in the form of a several thousand strong demonstration by hostile and in many cases pro-terrorist leftist protesters. At points during the President's public appearances, the demonstrators were within 50 feet. Radio reports at the time indicated that the Secret Service detachment traveling with the President had been stripped of their weapons.

The Presidential security situation during that Canada visit was the subject of reported profiling by a group of university based associates of Bloomfield, Hubbard, et al. According to Thomas Mitchell, a professor at Carlton University in Ottawa and the sponsor of the soon-to-take-place Carlton Conference on International Terrorism in the 1980s, he personally conducted a profile study of the behavior of President Reagan, the Secret Service and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police on being faced with a severe security problem. Mitchell is himself known to be a sympathizer of environmentalist causes in addition to being an expert on terrorism. Among his co-sponsors for the Carlton conference on terrorism is Michael Widdington, a member of the Canadian Government's Crisis Management Team.

Such professional, indepth profiling of security procedures and the precise mannerisms of the targeted victim are preconditions for any professional hit attempt -- even an attempt in which the assassin is a "Manchurian" deployable.

Thomas Mitchell is identified as a consultant with the International Law Association. In his own written works, he has cited personal gratitude to Dr. David Hubbard for his contributions.

5. The British Security Commission

While the activities of the behavior modification specialists and the criminologists interfaced with their activities constitutes a critical area of investigation, the overall command over such an ambitious terrorist effort does not reside with these technicians.

In the case of the Permindex assassination activities of the 1960s, that command level decision making process was traced to the highest levels of a "one world command structure" deeply interfaced with the intelligence networks in the Royal Household of Britain.

One of the vehicles through which the Permindex assassination apparatus was activated was the British Security Commission, then known as the Radcliffe Commission. The Radcliffe Commission was constituted in 1962 under the pretext of conducting a thorough review of the security procedures of the British MI-5, MI-6 and other secret services. Strong evidence indicates that the conducting of this procedural review was merely a cover for the activation of a massive international dirty tricks campaign dedicated to preventing the U.S. and continental European governments from embarking on an independent economic and political policy profile contrary to the interests of the British oligarchy. Permindex director Louis M. Bloomfield was an asset of the Radcliffe Commission at the time of the John Kennedy assassination and the aborted attempts on General DeGaulle.
